

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION KENT STATE UNIVERSITY

As a part of Kent State University's $1 billion-plus, 10-year campus transformation plan, the new College of Business Administration building marks the first phase in the University's gateway to a distinctive Kent State.

The new College of Business Administration building is proposed to anchor in the transformation of the front campus along East Main Street, which will include a signature gateway to the university, additional green spaces and a new parking structure. A mock trading floor and a 400-seat theater are among other features of the proposed glass-walled $73 million project.

The proposed building includes a variety of classroom and learning laboratories, faculty and administrative offices, study and gathering spaces, and common areas that will encourage greater collaboration among students, faculty, staff and business leaders. The new building will model the type of learning environment that best supports students who will become the business leaders and entrepreneurs of the future.
